

Crypto in Germany 27-11-2025:

Germany is at the forefront of cryptocurrency in Europe. Demonstrating clear leadership at a regulatory level, crypto is completely legal in the country, legislated under the European Union's Markets in Crypto-Assets Regulation (MiCAR).

Germany was also the first country to officially recognize Bitcoin as a legal "unit of account" back in 2013, allowing for transparent and regulated business operations from the very beginning.

Thanks in part to this legal clarity the blockchain industry is on an upward trajectory across the nation, with signs that awareness and adoption are now accelerating at pace.

With over 13% of Germans already holding digital assets—and more than half planning to increase their exposure—crypto adoption is clearly on the rise.

There are many ways to buy cryptocurrency including Bitcoin in Germany. One popular method is by centralized exchange (CEX).

Binance, Bitpanda, Coinbase, Kraken, Bison and Bitcoin.de are all popular.

To utilize the services of a CEX you'll need to register and complete all mandatory Know Your Customer (KYC) requirements.

The registration process begins by providing basic personal details including full name and date of birth, and contact details including residential address, phone number, and email address.

Personal identity must be confirmed with a photo of government-issued identification such as a passport, national ID card, or driver's license. A photo of a recent bank statement or utility bill is also necessary to prove residence.

You may also be required to take a selfie of yourself holding these documents or to make a video call depending on the specific exchange.

In Germany there are a multitude of options for this. You can choose from Bank Transfer, Credit/Debit Card and in some instances PayPal or Apple Pay depending on the exchange.
