

Features of Ledger Wallet 18-01-2026:

One of the biggest risks in modern crypto is blind signing: approving a transaction on a screen that you cannot read or verify. This is a common tactic used by scammers to trick users into draining their wallets.

Clear Signing is Ledger's solution to this critical vulnerability. It translates complex smart contract data into human-readable language on your Ledger signer's Secure Screen. Instead of seeing a long string of random characters (a hash), you see exactly what the transaction does.

You can verify the exact details of the transaction on your trusted hardware device before pressing the button. It eliminates the guesswork, ensuring that what you see on the device is exactly what will happen on the blockchain. If the details on your computer or smartphone screen don't match the Secure Screen, you know immediately that your computer/phone may be compromised.

While Clear Signing helps you read a transaction, Transaction Check tells you if it is safe to sign. Acting as a proactive defense layer, this feature simulates your Ethereum transactions in real-time before you approve them.

Powered by transaction simulations, machine learning, and real-time threat detection, it scans transactions for malicious smart contracts, known scams, and wallet drainers. If a threat is detected, you receive an immediate warning on your screen.

In the Web2 world, we take for granted that our apps sync perfectly between our phones and laptops. In the decentralized ecosystem, achieving this without compromising privacy has been a significant technical challenge—until now.

Ledger Sync is a groundbreaking feature that allows you to synchronize your Ledger Wallet instances across your computer and smartphone quickly and securely. Powered by the Ledger Key Ring Protocol, it ensures that your accounts and settings are identical on every device you use. Trying to time the market is stressful and often ineffective. Ledger Wallet allows you to automate your crypto investments.
