

Ledger Devices: Which Is Best For Me? 05-11-2025:

Ledger's journey began in 2014, with a vision to create a security-focused solution for managing private keys. That same year, they launched the very first Ledger device.

Ledger was the first hardware wallet manufacturer to implement the Secure Element chip, the same high security chip used in passports and credit cards. This safeguards your private keys from online threats. Thanks to the secure element, Ledger's secure OS, Secure Screen, and more recently its Secure Touchscreen, the cornerstones of Ledger's security model, no Ledger device has ever been compromised.

Since then, there have been a new range of devices added to Ledger's lineup, so let's dive deeper into each of them and which might be the best choice for you.

In 2016, Ledger launched the Ledger Nano S, which introduced support for multiple cryptocurrencies beyond Bitcoin. Paired with the Ledger Live app in 2018, the Nano S is Ledger's best-selling device—a truly unique hardware wallet of its time.

The Ledger Nano S Plus is the successor to its best selling (now sunset) Ledger Nano S device. It is a budget-friendly and feature-rich hardware wallet that offers top-tier security. It offers support for over 5,500 digital assets, and compatibility with major desktop operating systems and Android devices, all packed into a compact, durable design with a user-friendly monochromatic OLED display.

The Ledger Nano S Plus improves on some of the limitations on its Ledger Nano S predecessor on storage and helps you adapt to some of the recent changes in the web3 landscape. We've previously deep dived into Ledger Nano devices and which one would fit your needs the best so make sure you get a quick look in before you make your decision to invest in a Ledger device.

Ledger released the award-winning Nano X in 2019, offering Bluetooth functionality, USB-C, improved battery life, and larger storage capacity, making it ideal for managing multiple digital assets.
