

Securely Ledger from Amazon 07-03-2026:

Ledger safeguards its distribution network through rigorous vetting and premier partnerships. Every device originating from our factory in Vierzon, France, is deployed exclusively via top-tier, globally trusted logistics providers, including DHL, FedEx, or Colissimo. We entrust our retail distribution solely to carefully authorised resellers in its network, such as Amazon and Best Buy, who receive inventory directly through our vetted logistics pipeline, expressly eliminating third-party wholesalers and grey market sourcing.

Furthermore, our distribution agreements contractually forbid these partners from restocking and reselling returned devices. Should you receive an opened or tampered package from any authorised reseller, including Amazon, contact Ledger Support immediately.

Ledger maintains a dynamic, official registry of authorised resellers. To guarantee product authenticity and supply chain integrity, we strongly encourage consumers to purchase via Ledger.com or an officially listed partner. Purchasing from unlisted, unauthorised sellers introduces material security risks and is strongly discouraged.

The risks that circulate online like ‘pre-seeded devices’, tampered packaging, counterfeit units etc., are real, and it doesn’t matter if it’s Amazon or any other retail source – verifying that you are buying from a legitimate reseller is your ultimate defence against these sorts of attacks. They are risks associated with buying from unauthorised or unverified sellers. Let’s understand some of the ways that attackers can target the supply chain. Check that the seller name on the listing matches the official Ledger storefront for your country. If the name differs — even slightly, or by a single character — that is a red flag. Amazon’s marketplace allows multiple sellers to list against the same product page, which can make it easy to accidentally purchase from an unauthorised third party. Always verify the seller name before adding to cart. When in doubt, use the ‘Sold by’ information on the product page and cross-reference it against the official list.
