

Security Hygiene 23-12-2025:

The exhilarating world of Web3 offers unprecedented opportunities, but it also comes with its share of perils, particularly during a bull run when the excitement can lead to hasty decisions. Just as a knight prepares for battle by donning a strong suit of armor and sharpening their combat skills, you too can prepare your digital self for the challenges of Web3. This article will equip you with the essential “armor”, tools, and setups, and guide you through the crucial “training” and behavioral changes needed to navigate the Web3 landscape safely and avoid falling victim to common scams. By proactively implementing these security measures and cultivating disciplined habits, you can protect your assets and safely enjoy Web3.

Once your wallet is locked down, your behaviors on signing transactions are tightened, scammers might give up on trying to steal your money. Or, they might move on to trying to infect your computer with malware or steal your social media accounts to leverage your relationships and trusted position to scam others. Let’s briefly touch on the significant ways you can prevent your Email, Twitter (X), and Discord from getting stolen by nefarious bull-market tactics! However, there is something that can protect all of them better:

Ensure that you have two-factor authentication enabled wherever possible. Unfortunately, not all 2FA methods offer the same level of security. SMS (texting) can be attacked by scammers who target your phone service provider in what’s called a SIM Swap attack. App-based solutions like Authy or Google Authenticator provide one-time codes that change periodically (usually within a minute or two), making them impossible for a hacker to guess. The Final Boss solution for these tools, which we often recommend for influencers or company key personnel, is using security keys. Of these, Yubico is the most commonly used, but did you know that you can also use your Ledger signer as a 2FA Security key? The most significant risk that users on social media platforms face is the deluge of scam DMs and contacts encountered there.
